The Old Man's Dream.

BY MRS. E. L. DENNIS.

Of what are you thinking to-night, Athlene?
Of what are you thinking to-night?
My hair is white, I know I am old.
Yet, have I not loved, have I not gold
For you, my beautiful queen,
Athlene?

For what are you sighing to-night, Athlene?
For what are you sighing to-night?
A queen herself might be pleased to come
To dwell in such a magnificent home
As this I have given to thee,
Athlene!

Why turn from my proffered caress, Athlene?
Why turn from my proffered caress?
You cannot expect a palace old man
Could get and care as a younger man can;
Yet I love you, my beautiful queen,
Athlene!

I remember when you were a child, Athlene—
Years ago, when you were a child—
You said if I loved you I would spare my life,
Some day you would be my beautiful wife.
I was younger, I know, Athlene,
Yet I never forget it, my queen.

This morning they gave you to me, Athlene.
This morning they gave you to me; I came
Though the fever and strength of my life is
I will love you forever my beautiful one,
And nothing shall part us,
Athlene.

You are strangely quiet, Athlene.
Have you no word for me?
Come nearer, my love, to the old man's side,
Let him gaze on the face of his lovely bride,
Athlene.

Now give me your hand, my wife,
White as the fallen snow,
And cold as the ice in the frozen stream,
My God, do I wake from a life-long dream?
You never have loved me,
Athlene!

Oh, is it for this I have lived,
Breaking your heart at last,
Chilling your life with sorrow and tears;
Killing a love I have cherished for years;
Forgive me, forgive me,
Athlene.

It will not be long, Athlene,
For the sands of my life run low;
Only the fall of a withered oak,
Only a sigh from a heart that broke—
The end, Athlene,
Of a weary dream.

A leaf from the shore of Time,
A wave from the sea of life;
Only, Athlene, my name to bear;
Only a widow's grief to wear—
I shall never be old up there,
Athlene.

There you will love me, my wife.
Softly, silently into the room
Shadows are creeping, Athlene;
The care and sorrow of life are o'er,
An angel waits at the open door;
The old man sleeps; he will gaze no more
On your beautiful face,
Athlene.

ADVERTISING.—The Inside Tracks says some good things in the following article which may be of practical value to some of our readers:

An advertisement is not always valuable in proportion to the space it occupies. A short advertisement four times is better than a very long one once. "Brag is a good dog, but Hold-fast is a better."

A prominent advertisement once or twice will be effective, if followed up by a steady card giving your business and address.

Don't take down your sign in dull times. People read newspapers all times of the year. If business admits of it, several small advertisements, with your name repeated every time, will avail more than the same collected, with your name only once.

Don't you fear to have a small advertisement by the side of a larger competing one. The big one can't eat it up.

Small advertisements and plenty of them, is a good rule. We were all babies once, yet we made considerable noise.

Don't advertise unless you have something worth advertising.

The easiest way in the world to accumulate a fortune is to advertise judiciously.

A double column once a year is not so good as a square fifty-two times a year. A furious shower does not soak in so well as a steady rain. The highest praise Artemus Ward had for George Washington was that he "never slept over."

HEALTH INSURANCE.—A thin cadaverous looking German, about fifty years of age, entered the office of a health insurance company and inquired: "Is he man in vat insures to people's belts?" The agent answered, "I attend to that business." "Vell, I want mine belts insured. Vot you charge?" "Different prices," answered the agent; "from three to ten dollars a year, and you get ten dollars a week in case of sickness." "Vell," said Mynheer, "I want ten dollars vert." The agent inquired his state of health. "Vell, I ish sick all the time. I'st shut out of bed two or three hours a day, and doctor says he can't do nothing more good for me." "If that is the state of your health," returned the agent, "we cannot insure it. We only insure persons who are in good health." At this Mynheer bristled up in great anger. "You must tink I's a fool. Vot you tink, I come pay you the dollars for insure my belt ven I vos vell?"

LOW RATES.—The price of passage on the opposition line from San Francisco to New York, is $50 for first cabin. Many persons are taking advantage of these low rates and are going East to visit the 'old folks at home.'

The Omaha Pacific Railroad Company have notified the Government that they intend to construct a railroad from Denver to the main road, a distance of 102 miles, and have it completed in October next.

CAUSE OF KEROSENE LAMP EXPLOSIONS.—Kerosene accidents occur from two causes: first, imperfect manufacture of the article; second, adulterations. But a lamp may be filled with bad kerosene, or with the vapor even, and in no possible way can it explode, unless atmospheric air has somehow got mixed with the vapor. A lamp, therefore, full, or nearly full of the liquid, is safe; and also one full of pure, warm vapor, is safe. Explosions generally occur when the lamp is first lighted without being filled, and also late in the evening when the fluid is nearly exhausted. The reason of this will readily be seen. In using imperfect or adulterated kerosene, the space above the line of oil is always filled with vapor, and so long as it is warm and rising freely, no air can reach it, and it is safe. At bedtime, when the family retire, the light is extinguished; the lamp cools, a portion of the vapor is condensed; this creates a partial vacuum in space, which is instantly filled with air. The mixture is now more or less explosive; and when, upon the next evening, the lamp is relighted without replenishing with oil, as is often done, an explosion is liable to take place. Late in the evening, when the oil is nearly consumed, and the space above filled with vapor, the lamp cannot explode so long as it remains at rest upon the table. But take it in hand, agitate it, carry it into a cool room, the vapor is cooled, air passes in, and the vapor becomes explosive. We hear much said about dangerous gases being formed in lamps, but this is an error. The whole hazard comes from air mixed vapor.

But how can we be positively assured of safety in the use of kerosene? How can we know the character of the article offered us by dealers? If consumers are willing to be put to a little trouble, a simple experiment will determine the safety of the kerosene they purchase. Fill a pint bowl two-thirds full of boiling water, and into it put a common metallic thermometer. The temperature will run up to over 200deg. By gradually adding cold water, bring down the temperature of the water to 100deg., and then pour into the bowl a spoonful of the kerosene, and apply a lighted match. If it takes fire, the article should be rejected as dangerous; if not, it may be used with a confident feeling of its safety.—Exchange.
